Major League Soccer Selects Deltatre as Web Technology Provider

New York, USA – March 8th: Deltatre – a leading digital technology company – announced today a multi-year agreement with Major League Soccer making Deltatre the League’s web technology provider.

Under the agreement, MLS and Deltatre will work on a series of digital products for the League and MLS Clubs.

“Being selected by MLS is testament to Deltatre’s unique ability to provide cutting-edge digital solutions that serve the needs of the most forward-thinking and high-profile sports federations and rights-owners,” said Jeff Volk, SVP, Head of Business and Revenue, Americas at Deltatre. “This collaboration is another outstanding step for Deltatre, underlining our incredible progress and growth in the U.S.”

“Deltatre shares our commitment to implementing leading technology that enhances and evolves the fan experience,” said MLS SVP of Media Chris Schlosser. “Their impressive track-record in working with some of the largest sports leagues, allied to its reputation for innovation and delivery, made working together an obvious choice.”

The news follows a strong 12 months for Deltatre. Among many highlights, last year Deltatre announced it had completely redesigned and revamped Juventus FC’s digital ecosystem.

This collaboration marks another key milestone for Deltatre, boosting its already impressive presence in the U.S. Deltatre technology now underpins the digital offering for three of the largest North American professional sports leagues, adding MLS to a roster that also includes Major League Baseball.
